

Day 7 | Until We Meet Again, Honduras | Monday 20

After a day and a half stranded in Miami due to our connecting flight to Virginia being canceled, we are finally home.

We are tired, but our hearts are full. We went to serve, but once again, Honduras reminded us that mission is about encounter; seeing Christ in one another, sharing hope, and allowing our own lives to be transformed. Divine intervention showed up in so many ways, and we thank God for those “so that” moments that reminded us He was guiding every step.

Thank you to everyone who prayed for us, supported Operation Starfish, and made this journey possible. Your generosity, sacrifices, and unwavering love are transforming lives and creating opportunities that will echo for generations. You are living the Gospel by sharing God's love in tangible ways. What a week. What a gift. What a faithful God.

Don't forget to come to the Fall Festival next month to enjoy a cup of Honduras coffee while the missionaries tell you all about this blessed adventure.

We may have left Honduras, but Honduras will never leave our hearts. This is not goodbye, only hasta pronto.

"Whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me." —
Matthew 25:40
